Pelle and Yoko save the forest
 Illustrated by: Andrea Reitmeyer
 Format: 245 x 245 mm • 32 Pages • Age group: 3+ • Hardcover, four-colored throughout

On a joint mission

Pelle, a brown bear cub, and his best friend Yoko, a little fox lady, live together with other animals in the forest. They always have a lot of fun together and they love their environment and nature. That makes it even worse, when the brook, whereby they live, starts to dry out gradually. Where did the water go? Pelle and Yoko set out on an adventurous search and eventually find out that the beavers have built a huge dam in order to keep the water for themselves. Now the two friends have an important task: They have to bring back the water to the other animals.

Kids need rest periods too. A children's story about mindfulness

Debut novel by well-known singer-songwriter from Hamburg

Ove Thomsen
Rain in the Mind
 Illustrated by: Melf Petersen

How do I take care of myself

The anteater Gunnelt does not know what to do, as he has so much work to do right now. Actually he really likes to be the caretaker in the rain forest. He likes to be there for the other animals when they need him. But somehow nothing seems to make him happy any more now. It feels like having rain in the mind. His housemate Guschi the amardillo advises him: Relax and go for a walk! Luckily enough Gunnelt's walk leads him to the monkey Doctor Willi. He has an important tip for him: HAVE A REST. Will this advice help to bring back some sunshine to Gunnelt's life?

With his first children's book the singer-songwriter Ove Thomsen wants to contribute to the preservation of his mother tongue, therefore it is available not only in High German but also in Platt Deutsch, the dialect which is spoken in Nord Frisia, the region the author comes from.

Melf Petersen is a graphics designer, illustrator and musician, and since early childhood a close friend of Ove Thomsen. They played together in a band and have now created their first children's book together.

How do monkeys, cats, giraffes mourn the loss of one of their fellow animals?

A non-fiction illustrated children's book about the dealing with loss and death

Empathetically illustrated by Miren Asiain Lora

How Animals Mourn
 Illustrated by: Miren Asiain Lora

About saying good-bye, mourning and remembering

Elephants withdraw from their herd when they feel it's time to die. Chimps carry their dying fellows to the place of their final rest and don't return there for a while after having kept the wake. Cats show less interest in food or playing when they have lost someone, they have been close to. Many animal species express mourning in their own specific way, this is being researched even more in science nowadays. There is not only one right way to mourn somebody, but many variations. This special book shows children that mourning and death have their place in life and helps dealing with these difficult subjects.

Und tatsächlich! Nach einer Weile hante der kleine Kater hervor. Leon und Marie saßen ihre Angelhaken auf und ah fragten Theo sprang hoch und greift mit dem Farn nach der Beute. Was für ein schönes Spiel! Paffi freut sich. „Ich will auch mal!“ Er springt nach einer Angel und trifft dabei mit seiner Pfote ans Versteck des Kätzchens. Theo jault auf und laucht den Drachen an. „Nicht so wild, Paffi!“ mahnt Paffi. „Das hat Theo wohl.“ Der kleine Drache hat das Gefühl, alles falsch zu machen. Fast fängt er an zu weinen.

„Theo“ ist ein Pappi. „Jetzt hat sich Theo unter dem Sofa versteckt.“ „Wir versuchen ihn mit unserem Katzenangel zu locken.“ Paffi“, sagt Marie aufgeregt. Darauf hat Paffi gar keine Lust. Soll das kleine Kätzchen bleiben, wenn sie ist, denkt er. Die Kinder nehmen ihre Angel und legen die Scheibe mit den Papierkugeln und den Farn vor dem Sofa. Marie rief. „Nun nicht über die Scheibe in der Ruhe langieren zu sein. Die Kugeln und die Feder müssen sich dabei bewegen. Katern jagen gern.“

Am nächsten Morgen sind Marie und Leon schon früh wach. Sie haben Mama und Papa beim Frühstück machen. „Hilft dir Paffi schon geschickt?“, fragt Mama und stellt eine Schale auf den Tisch. „Dieser Reiter bekommt heute eine Extraportion Runen zum Naschen.“ Leon schüttelt den Kopf. „Ich glaube, Paffi schläft noch.“ Marie will Theo kitzeln, aber sie kann ihn nicht finden. „Ich auch“, ruft Marie. „Das Kätzchen ist schon wieder weg.“

„Hilf mir!“ Leon grunzt. „Ich glaube, Paffi schwimmt.“ Marie und Leon gehen zum Fluss. „Paffi schwimmt über Kopf“, sagt Marie schmerzhaft. „Auf Paffi Drachentanz“, sagt Leon und schmeißt. „Jetzt schwimmt er dem kleinen Drachen über den Gesichts.“ Marie schreit. „Ich glaube, die beiden sind Freunde geworden.“ „Nein“, sagt Leon. „Drachentanz Freunde“, sagt Paffi und lacht sein kleines Drachen-Lachen.

A Trial of Courage: Saying 'No'!

A simple 'No' is not always easy to say. To decline silly trials of courage on the other hand is a sign of strength. This book encourages children to weigh up decisions and to say 'No' every once in a while. The funny and sometimes comical trials of courage come to life through Anna Süßbauer's colorful illustrations. And at the end of the book one even says 'Yes' to the question: "Do you dare to kiss me?" Because sometimes it is in fact worth saying 'Yes' to a trial of courage. This is a book giving courage to kids as well as a gift book for a wedding.

Emily, the Wind and the Waves Rights sold to China.

Emily loves to walk in the sand bare-footed. As she reaches the beach she realises that the sea has disappeared! At its place she now only sees stretches of wet sand. At once Emily sets off to look for the sea. On her way, she meets seagulls, seals and many other new friends, who all have a different explanation for why the sea disappeared. But which of the stories is true? On her adventurous journey of discovery, Emily learns all about high tide and low tide and the diversity of the sea. An exciting story to read aloud and for children to discover for themselves. In addition they can make their own moon calendar and test their new knowledge about the tides.

Do you want to be my friend?

Hanni Hare really wants a friend to play with. But who could be a good friend? The fish or the giraffe? The flower? Perhaps the butterfly? Or the moon? No, none of them can be a friend – what a pity! But then the cuddle-bear comes along and asks Hanni Hare: “Hanni, shall we be friends? You can eat from my honey-pot and I’ll show you my favourite picture book.” Well, if that isn’t friendship ... Wonderful!

Birte Müller studied children’s books illustration at the HAW in Hamburg. Already as a child her favourite hobbies were painting, handicraft work and writing stories. In the meantime her books have been translated into more than twenty languages. Today, she organises readings and workshops for children. Her book 'Planet Willi' was nominated for the German Juvenile Literature Award in 2013.

Ulrich Maske is an author and composer and works as a musician and director too. He worked as a music producer with many internationally known and renowned folk and jazz musicians and produces audio books and audio plays for children and adults. He writes books, children’s songs, rhymes and poems.

A story of adventure and friendship

Three friends – the cat, the little bird and the dog – are bored at home. So they set off into the big wide world, where they get to know lots of adventurous things: an adventure jungle, sky and earth giants, a magic forest, a ghost, stinging-spirits, the devil, the moon that has fallen from the sky, and finally, the end of the world. Luckily, they find a wonderful house where they can make themselves comfortable in the evening!

The story of an unusual friendship

“I’m a tiger and I can catch you – if I want to!”
 “Tweet-tweet, big cat”, the bird answers, “I can fly!”
 And this is how an unusual friendship begins, illustrated in wonderful pictures. Who is more clever, who is stronger, better? Who can arch his back, ruffle himself to a feather-ball, stand on one leg or wash himself with his tongue, who can look at the world upside-down, purr very quietly, hiss terribly ... but sing? Can a cat sing? Well, at the end they both sing beautifully and they are very, very tired. “Lalala, miaow-miaow”. Tired but very, very happy.

Is there any right or wrong religion?

Nathan, a Jewish sales man in Jerusalem is being called in order to borrow money to Sultan Saladin. But instead of talking about the loan, a conversation about the true religion evolves. A difficult question that Nathan answers by telling the famous parable of the Ring. This story that calls upon a peaceful co-operation and more tolerance is here being retold for big and small. The affectionate illustrations take you to a fantastic journey to the Orient.

One for All – All for One

On a rainy day Frieda and her brother Max come to Colorula, the realm of colors. Between forest and sea, every village shines in a different color: blue like the gentle giants, yellow like the cheeky dwarfs, purple like the fairies and green like the forest pixies. But the inhabitants of this realm are at strife with one another. Who has the most beautiful colour in the country? However, each one is unique, Frieda and Max know. They show the inhabitants how lovely it is to have this variety and that community is irreplaceable.

Teresa George
was born in India in 1998 and grew up in Germany. In 2014 she got in touch with the project “Colorula” and its chairman Wolfram Geiger. It’s dedicated to children who grow up under the most diverse conditions. This story is based on the eponymous musical that has already thrilled a broad audience.

Schimmel trägt dich immer weiter

Niema nanna nanna nanna
 In ein schöner Tag vergangen
 Vom Hof des Mondes dort am Himmel
 Kommt ein leiser Schritt ein Schimmel

Niema nanna nanna nanna
 Schimmel hat ein Fell wie Seide
 Trägt dich fort auf seinem Rücken
 In den Abend auf Wälderböcken

Niema nanna nanna nanna
 Eine Reise soll nicht enden
 Im Nachblau fließen Silberflüsse
 Meer und Himmel tauschen Klänge

Wenn's regnet, ist's ein sanftes Küssen
 Und wenn's schneit, dann schneit es Rosen

Weiter geh' es wie auf Schwingen
 Durch die Nacht klingt leises Singen

Mond ist rund und lacht heiter
 Schimmel trägt dich immer weiter

Das Abendschiff ist gekommen

Die Segel singen ein Lied
 Erzählen bis vom Tag
 Und klingen schon etwas müde

Das Schiff bringt schöne Träume
 Die wiegen gar nicht schwer
 Sie fliegen zu dir hin
 Kommt da ein bisschen hier her

Da liegt das Schiff unserer Träume
 Am liebsten liegt es bei dir
 Es schaukelt nicht im Wind
 Und bleibt bis morgen hier
 Es schaukelt nicht im Wind
 Und bleibt bis morgen hier

Wenn der Wind durchs weite Land geht

Wenn der Wind durchs weite Land geht
 Kann er abends viel erzählen
 Wie laut morgens in den Bergen
 Blies in Schluchten und in Höhlen

Wehe dann durch grüne Täler
 Sehst dort viele Schafe grasen
 Kommt nach den jungen Lämmern
 In die weichen Locken Maren

Reitet über lange Flüsse
 Und sehst die Ferkeln springen
 Hört ein Ufer junge Mädchen
 Ihre alten Lieder singen

Bin am großen Meer gekommen
 Weg die Schiffe nach im Hafen
 Wehe hier ein bisschen wehrlos
 Doch der Wind kann niemals schiffen

Warte auf den Morgenbruten
 Diesen Duft von frischen Brotzen

 studied illustration and communication design. She freelances as an artist, illustrator, author, consultant and teacher. Being co-founder of the German Tivola Publishing company, she developed successful children's books series such as "Oscar the balloonist".

Deep down hidden in a forest long forgotten lives Robby with his tomcat Momo and his crow Karla. Robby is a real robber – at least that's what his granny, the wild Hilde says. But he on the other hand doesn't find himself very robber-like. Even less when thinking of the cool girl Thea with her yellow gumboots. Thea is looking for her aunt Dora. But how to find her without having an address and while having to stop two real robbers at the same time? For Thea and Robby starts a big adventure ...

Robby loves his robber's cave and the forgotten forest with the great bonfire place therein. But his paradise seems to be in danger: because right there the mayor Mr. Bogey wants to build a new office building. The only good thing is that the gumboot girl Thea helps Robby in word and deed. And of course there further is this mysterious book about great inventions, which helps them playing some tricks on the too enthusiastic builder-owner ...

"This charming adventure story reminds us of Astrid Lindgren's unforgettable children's heroes such as 'Mio, my Mio' or 'Kalle Blomquist'." review by editorial team of Germany's biggest library service EKZ

While a false twenty Euro note causes trouble in the little town Jottwede, Robby and Thea are looking after an injured bat. While the bat tries to escape at night the two witness some mysterious flashlights in the old villa and by that slowly get on the track of the guy who's counter-feeding the money. But this time Granny Hilde has nothing to do with it. Double Phew!

Wilder than ever before

Today, of course the little savages are all veggies. However, luckily some of their stories from before that, when they weren't vegetarians yet, have been bequeathed. Within these stories the little savages hunt forest berries and other and invite the mammoth to their BBQ party, so that it could grill itself. But when the mammoth laughs so hard that it nearly dies of the laughing attack, their dreams nearly come true. On the other hand, during the terribly cold winter nights the mammoth has its advantage: being warm and cosy. So the little savages all at once become very amicable and peaceful with the mammoth in order to snuggle up with it tightly.
